

The adaptive piecewise tensor product wavelet scheme for solving operator equations

Rob Stevenson

The adaptive wavelet method for solving well-posed operator equations converges with the rate of best N -term approximation. When tensor product bases are applied this rate is independent of the dimension of the underlying domain. We discuss the application of piecewise tensor product bases to generalize these results to non-product domains.